What is happening this week? We are looking at the artist and author, Eric Carle. We have chosen his style to be one of the types of art we hope to copy for our art night in April. We started to do some painting today with this in mind. We will also be comparing his realistic fiction to his nonfiction works.

Social: We will continue to identify our feelings and use appropriate words to describe them. This in turn will help us use the right words when speaking to our friends.

Literacy: All of our books this week will be Eric Carle works and we hope to see his same art style throughout the works we will explore. Our letter this week is "Z" for zoo. This is where you may find many of the animals we will read about in these books.

Math: We are working on our one to one counting as well as number identification.

Art: we are beginning the multi-step process necessary to create animals like in Eric Carle's stories.

Important things to remember: Bring a water bottle every day for your children. We really do find if they have their own bottle they stay hydrated better. Please label all personal belongings so they can be returned to you if they go missing. Let us know if you have ANY questions.

Thanks for sharing your children with us,

Ms. Judy
